Euro 5 and Euro 6 EE20 engines had a closed circuit diesel particle filter (DPF); Both the oxidation catalyst and the DPF were placed next to the turbocharger to use the heat of the exhaust air. Alternator The alternator for the EE20 diesel engine had a voltage load control system that, to reduce the loading of the engine in the engine, reduced the load voltage when the vehicle was roli. EURO 6 changes the EE20 diesel engine that meets Euro 6 emissions at the subaru bs outback in 2014 and the subaru SJ.H Forester in 2015. In relation to the Euro 5 version, the changes for the Euro 6 EE20 engine included: a open cover cylinder block; An increase in the capacity of the crown of the piston; A new piston skirt coating was introduced to reduce friction; A reduction in the compression relationship to 15.2: 1 at a more low combustion temperature and reduces NOX emissions; An injection system of a fourth generation commission was introduced for a greater injection pressure (200 MPa, previously 180 MPa) and a fine fuel spray; Each diesel injector had an integrated conductor unit to reduce the fuel leakage volume, the fuel pump load and improve the fuel economy. A chain of low friction synchronization was introduced to conduct the fuel pump (previously directed by gears) for a quiet operation; The bright plugs were checked to improve the preheating temperature at the start and increase the time after brightness; Oil jets were added to the unit of the distribution chain; An EGR of low pressure EGR was introduced to increase the EGR rate, while the high pressure EGR was "optimized"; The repositioned in the lower right of the engine (previously below the engine) and better the palette control; Diesel particle filter substrate specifications (DPF) were checked and regeneration yield better.
